1 Circus fatality

The director of a circus arena says an ice-skating bear turned on its trainers, killing one and seriously wounding another. Kurmangazy Isanayev said workers dragged the trainers with a visiting Russian troupe away from the bear following Wednesday's attack, as they were rehearsing for a show in Bishkek.

7 Windows, updated, flame broiled

Microsoft finally got its chance to reboot its reputation Thursday, launching a new edition of Windows that it hopes will encourage more PC buyers to get back into stores. And in Japan, Burger King teamed up with Microsoft to offer the Windows 7 Whopper featuring seven—yes, seven—burger patties and all the usual trimmings.

5 YEARS Who controls the Web?

Federal regulators took an important step Thursday toward prohibiting broadband providers from favoring or discriminating against certain kinds of Internet traffic. The Federal Communications Commission voted to begin writing so-called "network neutrality" regulations. Next up for the FCC is to actually craft the rules, which would culminate a five-year debate in Washington that has pitted Internet companies against some of the biggest phone and cable companies.

Jobless claims up, but economy growing

Associated Press

NEW YORK A private forecast of economic activity rose for the sixth straight month in September, a sign the economy may keep growing early next year despite rising unemployment.

The number of new claims for jobless benefits jumped more than expected last week. Claims had fallen in five out of the previous six weeks, and most economists expect that trend to continue but at a slow pace, with employers still reluctant to hire.

The Conference Board said Thursday that its index of leading economic indicators rose 1 percent last month after a 0.4 percent gain in August, beating economists' expectations.

The group said the indicators' 5.7 percent growth rate in the six months through September was the strongest since 1983, but joblessness is weighing on the rebound.

Dips in manufacturing hours worked and building permits, a gauge of future construction, were the only two measures out of 10 that weighed down the index. It is meant to project economic activity in the next three to six months.

The six-month rate is consistent with annual economic growth of about 8 percent, said Paul Dales, U.S. economist at Capital Economics. It's unlikely the rebound will be that strong, however, as the index may be "distorted" by the Federal Reserve's rock-bottom interest rates and market liquidity measures, he said.

Claims for jobless benefits jumped last week after falling five out of the previous six weeks.

TALK BACK

How much responsibility do homegrown celebrities bear when it comes to saving Chicago's communities? Or is it really just their job to entertain? Weigh in at redeyechicago.com/kylesfiles or e-mail Kyra at kkyles@tribune.com.

Stars need to put community first

Some celebs are really into community service.

Just look at the combined contributions of Chris Brown, Boy George, Lindsay Lohan and Naomi Campbell.

Oh wait—that was all court-ordered.

But seriously, there are many entertainers who donate time to good causes sans orange jumpsuits: Angelina Jolie, Brad Pitt, Tyler Perry and Bono to name just a few.

Yet there are many who could do much more to give back, including offering an assist to the communities that gave them their start.

Earlier this week, we saw a shining example of that when David Banner, a Mississippi rapper and activist, traveled to his birthplace of Chicago in memory of Fenger High School honor student Derrion Albert, who was beaten to death last month.

Banner still feels a connection to this community and involved rappers—including Rhymefest, Twista and Naledge—to join his “Something’s Wrong” campaign.

Banner and the homegrown hip-hop talent plan to work together with city officials to raise awareness for, and address, the inner city challenges that led to Albert’s death.

As a hip-hop fan, I was elated to see this convergence for community awareness. But I echo Rhymefest’s disappointment that other Chicago stars—including athletes, successful entrepreneurs and musical artists—appear to be tardy to the party.

Rhymefest repeatedly pointed out the hypocrisy in a lengthy interview with me.

“We make time for women, make time for nonsense, make time for the club, but we’re too busy for our kids,” Rhymefest said in comments posted on redeyechicago.com/kylesfiles. “Not just our biological kids, but those children who look to us as role models.”

To make sure they pay their debt to society, Rhymefest agitates for action via Twitter, meanwhile highlighting his own efforts to improve Chicago neighborhoods through volunteering and protesting for jobs in his community.

“Now as I prepare to release my second major debut album EL CHE I’ve joined a Chicago community organization CEASE FIRE,” Rhymefest recently tweeted. “CEASE FIRE and I R currently creating a covenant between artists[s], athletes, radio and community. We will get everyone to sign on! Or hood passes will be revoked.”

Hopefully others in the entertainment, business and political realm will heed Rhymefest’s caps-lock laden call to action and join us Average Joes and Janes in the battle to reclaim our neighborhoods. Youth are dying at alarming rates and clearly something must be done—and fast.

Surely that honorable effort is worth a respite from the red carpet.

Celebs—no matter their talent level—ultimately make money because we love them. Because we show up when they are doing something worthwhile.

It’s not too much to ask for a little of that love in return, especially with so many communities in crisis.

BY THE NUMBERS

The SouthWest line carries 30 trains a day, 15 outbound from Union Station and 15 inbound from Manhattan.

MESS ON THE TRACKS

DERAILMENT FORCES METRA TO CANCEL, DELAY TRAINS

Chicago Tribune

Metra canceled several trains and warned of hour-long delays on the SouthWest line Thursday night as officials investigated how freight locomotives that derailed south of Union Station rolled out of a nearby rail yard.

Union Pacific would not say whether controls were properly set on the locomotives or whether anyone was on board.

"The focus of the investigation is to find out how that happened," said Mark Davis, a spokesman for Union Pacific.

Eight locomotives, all connected, rolled out of the rail yard near 18th Street around 8 a.m. Four of them derailed at the bridge over the Chicago River, tying up commuter trains and leaking gear oil in the river.

A team of inspectors was sent to the scene after the accident to investigate the derailment, the Federal Railroad Administration said.

The investigators planned to interview crew members, inspect equipment and review records to determine the cause, including a possible mechanical failure or human error, spokesman Warren Flateau said.

The agency could take a month to complete its findings and would not be issuing any preliminary results, he said.

It is not unusual for train cars or locomotives to roll loose, he said. "But clearly it should not happen. It's a serious thing to have equipment roll unattended," Flateau said.

One possible explanation was that a crew member neglected to set the brakes on the idling locomotives, and the equipment simply rolled down an incline, experts said.

If human error was involved, crew members could face disciplinary actions ranging from a work rule infraction to a violation of a federal regulation.

Two of Metra's SouthWest trains headed for Union Station were stopped for up to an hour at 21st Street. Metra canceled four midday trains and three evening trains, and warned that evening rush hour trains also would likely be delayed.

"We'll have to use this complicated procedure to get the trains out off Union Station," Metra spokesman Meg Reile said. "It involves using alternate tracks through a rail yard."

Metra has been told it could take 12 hours to clear the derailment. It could take less time, but Reile said Metra decided to cancel the four trains as a precaution and warn commuters of probable delays. Amtrak trains that travel through the area also were affected, with some delays and cancellations.

The accident occurred around 11:30 a.m. when a Ford van heading east on Washington collided with the minivan that was heading south on Kostner Avenue and ran a red light, police said.

Brown was walking with a woman and two children when they were struck. The 30-year-old woman and two girls, ages 3 and 1, were in good condition at Mt. Sinai Hospital.

Kim Brown's grandmother, Ivie Brown, said she'll be caring for her granddaughter's five children. The children, three boys and two girls, range from 3 to 12 years old.

Baby delivered after auto crash dies

Chicago Tribune

A baby delivered after a crash that killed his mother died Thursday morning, as investigators considered homicide charges against a driver of a minivan who allegedly ran a red light.

Doctors at Stroger Hospital delivered the boy by Cesarean section after Wednesday's crash. He was listed in "extremely critical" condition and died just before noon Thursday, according to hospital officials.

"The baby suffered injuries [from the crash] in addition to being premature," said Stroger Hospital spokesman Marcel Bright. The boy had been 6 or 7 months along.

His mother, Kim Brown, 27, of the 4900 block of West Cortez Street, was pronounced dead shortly after the surgery.

The driver of the minivan, a 39-year-old man from the West Side, was taken to Loretto Hospital after Wednesday's crash and was in police custody Thursday, authorities said.

He has so far been cited for running a red light, driving on a revoked license and driving without insurance. Even before the baby died, police had been seeking reckless homicide charges against the man. The Cook County state's attorney's office is looking into the case, officials said.

Attorney faces sanctions over ad

A Chicago immigration attorney is facing sanctions after he demanded “sexual interaction with me and my partner” as a job condition from a woman seeking a position as legal assistant at their firm.

After the woman responded to an ad that Samir Z. Chowhan placed in the “Adult Gigs” section of Craigslist, he told her in a follow-up e-mail that she also would need to “perform for us sexually” as “part of the interview process.”

Chowhan first denied he posted the online ad but later admitted it, according to the complaint. He could not be reached for comment Thursday.

In May, Chowhan posted the online ad seeking an “energetic woman” for “general secretarial work, some paralegal work and additional duties for two lawyers.” The ad sought a resume, photographs and “a description of your physical features, including measurements.”

A woman, who thought the request unusual but assumed the firm was looking for an attractive secretary, responded the same day and included her measurements and a photo, the complaint said.

Chowhan e-mailed back.

“In addition to the legal work, you would be required to have sexual interaction with me and my partner, sometimes together sometimes separate,” the complaint quoted the e-mail as saying.

“This part of the job would require sexy dressing and flirtatious interaction with me and my partner, as well as sexual interaction.”

The e-mail went on to say that other women had been hired who “have not been able to handle the sexual aspect of the job later. We have to be sure you’re comfortable with that aspect, because I don’t want you to do anything that you’re not comfortable with. So since that time, we’ve decided that as part of the interview process you’ll be required to perform for us sexually.”

“When are you available to interview?” the e-mail allegedly read. “I am free to interview today.”

The woman was “frightened” by the e-mail and didn’t follow through, according to the complaint. She complained to the commission in June. A panel will review the charges.

Several fights at Fenger result in 5 arrests

Five students were arrested Thursday after at least a dozen fights broke out at Fenger High School, 10 of them in the lunchroom alone.

There were no reports of injuries, but police said they charged four students with reckless conduct and one with aggravated assault.

Officers were called to the school, 11220 S. Wallace Ave., at about 11:25 a.m. to respond to a disturbance in the lunchroom, police said.

A witness said there were at least 10 fights in the cafeteria throughout the day, and at least two others in other parts of the school.

There were four fights during the sophomore students’ lunch period, and three during the seniors’ lunch period, the witness said. Juniors were held at their lunch period for at least double the usual time because of a fight in another part of the school.

Fenger has been in the spotlight since the slaying of Derrion Albert, 16, during an after-school brawl on Sept. 24. A video of the beating was circulated widely on TV and the Web, prompting a national outcry.

The brawl and other incidents have resulted from feuding between students from the neighborhood and those from the Chicago Housing Authority’s Altgeld Gardens public housing complex.

Single bottles of beer for sale in Arlington Heights
LANE CHRISTIANSEN/TRIBUNE

Get your warm beer!

Arlington Heights has a new strategy in its battle with those who wander village streets, sipping their favorite beverage from a paper bag: warm beer.

A law passed by the village this week prohibits the sale of single cans of refrigerated beer. Singles still can be purchased but will have to be chilled elsewhere.

Village officials first considered an outright ban on single-container sales, but the alternate plan emerged after retailers said such a blanket prohibition could cost them big bucks.

“The compromise is good,” said retailer Connie Karavidas, co-owner of Teddy’s Liquor Stores in Arlington Heights. “Working with the village and police, it’s the best we can do.”

The law, which takes effect in January, also allows the sale of single beer or malt liquor cans only if the cans are larger than 24 ounces.

Meanwhile, in March other restrictions take effect on single containers of wine, which must be larger than 10 ounces. Other alcoholic beverages must be in containers larger than 6.4 ounces, a requirement aimed at easy-sipping, little bottles like those sold on airlines.

Mt. Prospect has a similar ban on the sale of refrigerated single-containers. “We haven’t had any violations or any complaints,” Police Officer William Roscop said.

But will it work? “Don’t be surprised if it doesn’t work out to the hopes of the Police Department,” Arlington Heights village trustee Joe Farwell warned. “The alcoholic isn’t going to sit there and say, ‘Well, I like my beer cold.’”

Quinn formally launches election bid

Gov. Quinn, elevated to the state’s top job upon the January ouster of Rod Blagojevich, formally launched his bid for election as governor Thursday. He pledged to work non-stop to restore Illinois’ economy, create jobs and improve education and health care amid a multi-billion dollar recessionary deficit. Quinn launched his election bid, a nine-city tour of the state, at the downtown Allegro Hotel that has been the site of many of his past political events spanning three decades.

McClendon’s son speaks out

A member of the McClendon family is blaming the “thug mentality” in the black community for the slaying of his parents and said black leaders have “to wake up” to change it.” Theodore McClendon posted a 3 minute video Thursday on Facebook in which he said that “this kind of intimidation has to stop.” McClendon and his brother Garrard, a CLTV host, are sons of Milton and Ruby McClendon, a black couple whose bodies were found Monday in a forest preserve.

Jewel closing Urban Fresh store

Jewel-Osco is pulling the plug on Urban Fresh, the small format grocery store aimed at city dwellers. The store at 1910 N. Clybourn Ave. in Lincoln Park—Jewel’s first and only Urban Fresh—is slated to close Oct. 30, confirmed spokeswoman Karen May. The 16,000-square-foot test store opened in September 2008 with ready-to-eat gourmet meals, a wine and cheese shop for folks who “don’t have time to shop for groceries,” according to the Urban Fresh Web site.

Teen shot, killed

A 17-year-old Tilden High School student was found shot and killed Thursday afternoon as he walked home from school in Back of the Yards on the South Side, Chicago police and other officials said. The teen, whose name has not been released, was shot about 2:40 p.m. on the street near West 47th Street and South Racine Avenue.

Body believed to be missing girl

1 Huge drug bust

Atty. Gen. Eric Holder calls it the largest single strike at a Mexican drug cartel operating in the U.S.—the arrest of more than 300 people in a series of drug raids across the country. Holder said the arrests over the past two days were aimed at the U.S. operations of the La Familia cartel. AP

2 Headbutter sentenced

A man who headbutted his attorney during his murder trial has been sentenced to 39 years in prison for shooting a man he believed was having an affair with his girlfriend. Eriberto Gonzales, 25, was convicted this month in Yakima, Wash.

3 No mail for you!

Britain's mail service ground to a halt Thursday after tens of thousands of postal workers walked off the job in a 48-hour national strike. Rolling walkouts that began over the summer have contributed to a backlog of some 5 million packages and letters.

4 Tanker explodes

A liquid propane tanker exploded Thursday on an Indianapolis highway ramp, closing Interstates 69 and 465. The truck driver was taken to a hospital with burns that didn't appear life threatening, and at least one other driver was taken to a hospital.

5 Airport attack

Mortars fired by Islamic militants slammed into Somalia's airport as the president was boarding a plane Thursday, sparking battles that killed at least 24 people when return fire hit residential areas and a market, officials said.

6 Va. Tech probe

Virginia Tech police are investigating written messages on YouTube that threaten a mass shooting at the university, but they believe there is no direct threat to the school. Police informed students and faculty of the investigation in an e-mail late Wednesday night.

7 It's lit

The flame for the Vancouver Olympics was lit by the sun's rays Thursday in a ceremony in Olympia, Greece, heralding the start of the torch relay for the 2010 Winter Games.

8 ORANGE PARK, Fla. Authorities believe a body found under trash in a landfill is that of 7-year-old Somer Thompson, a north Florida girl who vanished on her walk home from school, the sheriff in charge of the case said Thursday.

Clay County Sheriff Rick Beseler said the tentative identification was based on clothing and on a birthmark that matched the girl's. An autopsy was being performed Thursday by the Georgia Bureau of Investigation in Savannah after the body was found near the Florida state line.

Detectives spotted the legs first and found the body partially covered by garbage Wednesday in a Georgia landfill, after investigators followed garbage trucks leaving the neighborhood where the child disappeared Monday.

BACKGROUND

Somer vanished on her mile-long walk home from school in Orange Park. She was squabbling with another child, and her sister told her to stop. The girl got upset, walked ahead of the group and wasn't seen again.

Somer's father and other family members were "torn up" after hearing the news, aunt Laura Holt said. She hopes authorities will find her niece's killer.

"I don't think they deserve to live," Holt said. "I don't think there's anything worse that a person can do—to kill a child and dump her in the dump like a piece of trash?"

Beseler wouldn't talk about what evidence police have recovered, or whether investigators believe the crime was committed by one or more people. He said police have questioned more than 70 registered sex offenders in the area, and that process was continuing. Florida Department of Law Enforcement records show 161 offenders live in a 5-mile radius of Somer's home.

"I fear for our community until we bring this person in. This is a heinous crime that's been committed," Beseler said. "And we're going to work as hard as we can to make this community safe."

Iran rep backs off nuke deal

10 TEHRAN, Iran Iran's deputy parliament speaker on Thursday dismissed an internationally backed draft plan to have Tehran ship its uranium abroad for enrichment, the official IRNA news agency reported.

The remarks by Mohammad Reza Bahonar were the first reaction in Tehran on the proposal, presented Wednesday after three days of talks between Iran and world powers in the Austrian capital, Vienna.

The plan is seen by international community as a way to curb Iran's ability to build a nuclear weapon. Iran says its nuclear program is for peaceful purposes only.

Tehran is expected to decide by Friday on whether to approve the plan that calls for shipping Iran's uranium to Russia for enrichment to a level that renders it suitable as nuclear fuel for energy production—not for nuclear weapons.

Ballots delivered

9 The U.N. began delivering ballots and voting kits across Afghanistan on Thursday, as hurried preparations for the Nov. 7 runoff in the insurgency-plagued nation's presidential election got under way. AP

Ochocinco, Peanut collide

Ochocinco

Tillman

Associated Press

LAKE FOREST A serial Twitter tweaker, it figures that Chad Ochocinco would have something to say about Bears cornerback Charles "Peanut" Tillman this week, and he certainly took his share of playful jabs.

This, however, was not one of them.

"He's really, really good, man," the flashy Cincinnati Bengals receiver told Chicago reporters.

Tillman continues to play at a high level despite a run of injuries that might have limited him in the early going, and his likely matchup with Ochocinco figures to be one to watch when the Bears visit Cincinnati on Sunday.

A five-time Pro Bowl pick, Ochocinco took note after Tillman contained Detroit's Calvin Johnson and Atlanta's Roddy White in the Bears' past two games.

"He looks really good, and he's put up some shut-downs on some pretty good top receivers, so it's going to be a fun, interesting matchup come Sunday," Ochocinco said.

For a guy who had shoulder and back surgeries in the offseason and sat out the preseason, Tillman's doing just fine.

"The one thing I can always say is it's never as bad as you think because somebody out there has it worse than you," Tillman said.

That message hit him with the force of a blindside tackle last year when he found out his infant daughter Tiana needed a heart transplant. She became the first patient in Illinois to benefit from a computerized device called a Berlin Heart, a small pump located outside the body that helps the heart pump blood to the lungs and body. It serves as a bridge to a transplant, helping patients buy time until an organ becomes available.

Tiana is doing well. Others aren't so fortunate.

MATT FORTE VS. CEDRIC BENSON

BACK2BACK

Spotlight is on current, former Bears running backs as Cincinnati game approaches

Running back Matt Forte had one of the most unforgettable rookie years last season with the Bears. This season has been most forgettable. Cedric Benson can probably sympathize. The former Bears running back struggled in his three seasons in Chicago, but now he's among the NFL's best. The change in their fortunes has people asking what's going on. We'll try to answer the only way we know how—RedEye faceoff!

OFF-FIELD ANTICS

There was the drunken boating episode that he was eventually cleared of and the drunken driving charges that he also was cleared of.

On his critics: "I don't care what they talk about because they love you one minute and as soon as you do something [wrong], they hate you the next."

FIGHTING WORDS

On his former team: "I heard all the rumors that were said coming out of Chicago. Even the Bengals said they would call and inquire about me and get nothing but negative things ... that I didn't work hard, that I was, I guess, a prima donna, didn't work hard on the field, just wasn't focused."

Sounds like some advice he should have gotten in Chicago.

THE WINNER: MATT FORTE

If the results were based on this year's numbers alone, this would be no contest. Fortunately for Forte it is not.

Tough love for Bears

So, we're getting serious now.

Looks like the Bears and Jay Cutler just got married; the commitment is real.

It occurs to me, this whole "franchise QB" thing is new around here, and when we first got him, no one from Denver sent us a user's manual.

Allow me to provide one. Here's what it would say:

"Congratulations on your new acquisition. Now all you need to do is to change the entire mind-set of your organization."

We need playmakers. Look at what Orton's doing in Denver with what he has. Big-time receivers and a great running game. Now, imagine if Cutler had that. I can tell you this right now: If the Bears aren't successful with Cutler, it won't be Cutler's fault.

Offensive line. Orlando Pace blew a game for us. Hall of Famer, no. Hall of Shamer. Frank Omiyale, you're a missed block from getting replaced by Josh Beekman.

Receivers. Sorry, folks, I know we like guys like Devin Hester and Johnny Knox. They're good, not great. There are no difference-makers here. Go get some.

Matt Forte. Nice guy, stays out of trouble. Too bad he's merely average in my book.

Coaches. Sorry, we can do better. Ron Turner, whatever disease afflicts people associated with University of Illinois football, you've got it. You're boring and predictable. Hit the bricks. As for Lovie Smith, show me some emotion. Show me 3-2 at this point is unacceptable. Show me you care. 2006 was a lifetime ago.

Management. Sorry, focusing salary on the defensive side of the ball while letting guys like Bernard Berrian and Muhsin Muhammad go means you end up with squat on offense. And getting Gaines Adams means we have, what, 10 defensive ends now? Doesn't work.

Defense and special teams—you've gotten all the love for too long around here. Time to let the offense lead. Believe me, this is how it's done with every successful NFL team out there.

We're starting to get it around here, but it's like watching ice melt.

| 1 How concerned would you be if the Bears lose to Cincinnati on Sunday? | Hey, I'll be concerned if they win. A loss and my head's in the oven. | Very. Do you know what it means to lose bragging rights to Cincinnati? Look at Cleveland. | Not as concerned as I should be ... "Hard Knocks" kinda brainwashed me into liking the Bengals. | I'm concerned about my hookup slump. Don't distract me with these other stressors. | I will be more concerned if Forte fumbles the ball again. |
| 2 How can the Bears turn Chad Ochocinco's trash talk against him? | Smile and point to the scoreboard when it's over. | Ochocinco wants his own line of cologne, which we can re-label "Ochostinko." | Beat the Bengals, then have each player trash tweet talk him. | Earmuffs. | Tell him that his "last name" actually means eight-five, not eighty-five. |
| 3 How would one go about stopping Cedric Benson? | Give him a bong. | Pepper spray. Too soon? | It couldn't be that hard if the Bears got rid of him, right? Oh, wait ... | Suit him up in a Bears uniform. | Send him on one of his infamous boat rides. |
| 4 Now that preseason is almost over, what is your expectation for the Bulls? | Without Derrick Rose? No playoffs, and no watching. | Get over the Celtics hump. And by "hump" I mean Rasheed Wallace. | Another dull season. | Less time at Underground, more jersey chasers for me. | Injuries, but they'll make the playoffs only to lose in the first round. Hmm, sound familiar? |
| 5 What will Rudy Jaramillo do to make the Cubs hit better next season? | Drive Milton Bradley to wherever the Cubs trade him to. | Dunno, but he was able to handle Milton Bradley. Now that deserves the Nobel Peace Prize. | Magic? It might take that. | Pregame lap dances. My personal panacea. | Get A-Rod, Manny, Pujols, and Rollins—that should do the trick! |

Hurtin' heroes

Rose practices, but Toews out after hit Wednesday

Chicago Tribune

Here's a sentence never before written on the Bulls' beat: Supermodel Marisa Miller said Thursday that guard Derrick Rose has "long eyelashes and gorgeous eyes."

Miller

But the sexiest part of Rose's body for Bulls fans was a healthier right ankle, specifically the posterior tibialis tendon.

Rose returned to participate in the first 40 minutes of the Bulls' 2½-hour practice, his first action since suffering the injury in the Oct. 2 preseason opener. His availability for the pre-season finale against the Wizards will be determined after Friday's morning shootaround.

"I felt good," Rose said. "I was kind of mad they took me off kind of early. But they were looking out for me and playing everything with caution. I could've practiced the whole practice but they told me they didn't want me sore [Friday]."

"I asked them could I get some minutes, at least one or two to get the feel of the game. They said they'll see."

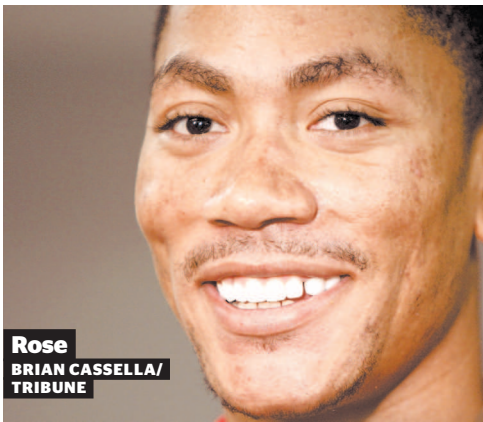

Rose's day included a visit and some photo-op one-on-one with Miller, a Victoria's Secret spokeswoman who is heading a campaign to pick Chicago's sexiest athlete.

Asked if he had heard of Miller before Thursday, Rose offered the line of the day.

"At first, everybody was telling me about her," Rose said. "Then I was seeing pictures of her and I'm like, 'Man, she looks pretty good.'" from Willie Mitchell, there was no lack of willingness from the Blackhawks captain's teammates to respond in kind.

There just wasn't much size and toughness to do it effectively.

With their two most physical players Ben Eager and Adam Burish, out with injuries, the Hawks mostly are finesse players.

Second-year winger Kris Versteeg was on the ice and the first to react as he quickly grabbed Mitchell. But he gave away five inches and 26 pounds to the Canucks defenseman.

Toews and defenseman Brent Seabrook, who also left the game during the third with an injury, didn't practice Thursday but coach Joel Quenneville said both "progressed really well overnight" and they could play Saturday.

The Toews incident raises the question of whether the Hawks should have retaliated for arguably their best player being knocked out of the game.

"Does it really do anything?" winger Patrick Kane said Thursday. "I don't really think it's worth it. Should someone have grabbed Mitchell? Versteeg had enough courage to go do that."

IF YOU DIDN'T THINK YOU COULD REACH THIS HIGH...
THINK AGAIN.

ON FIRE

Own goal helps Fire secure playoff appearance

The Fire clinched a playoff spot by beating CD Chivas USA 1-0 in their season finale Thursday night.

The Fire (11-7-12) got an own goal from Chivas' Eduardo Lillingston in the 68th minute. The forward headed Cuauhtemoc Blanco's corner kick—the Fire's 14th of the game—past goalkeeper Zach Thornton.

The victory snapped the Fire's 0-4-2 stretch and secured the Fire's fifth consecutive appearance in the MLS Cup playoffs, where it will hold the second seed in the Eastern Conference. The Fire's opponent will be determined this weekend as six teams are vying for the last two spots.

The loss by Chivas also allowed defending MLS Cup champion Columbus to clinch the Supporters' Shield for having the best regular-season record.

The Fire outshot Chivas 12-5, and goalkeeper Jon Busch made three saves for his 10th shutout, tying a career high set with Columbus in 2004.

Chivas USA has already clinched a playoff berth and is tied with Houston and L.A. atop the West while Seattle is one point back in fourth place.

Chivas hosts the Dynamo on Sunday, a day after the Galaxy faces San Jose and the Sounders meet Dallas.

Beans and booze reign at a new wave of coffeehouse bars

By Leonor Vivanco
REDEYE

Coffee or booze? Coffee or booze? At several new drinking spots, you don't have to choose.

At least a handful of local businesses have opened within the past few months, catering both to the coffee addicts who need their caffeine kick and drinkers who want a good buzz.

From Pure Cafe in West Rogers Park to Three Peas Art Lounge in the South Loop, fans of booze and beans can find a cup of whatever they like at these new spots. Even Starbucks is getting in on the action. The giant coffee chain is testing out the concept of adding beer and wine to its menu at one Seattle store.

Though bar-cafes such as the Map Room and Katarina's have championed the idea for years, Chicago seems to be further catching on to a trend seen in Europe and even the East Coast, said Darren Tristano, executive vice president of Technomic Information Services, a food service consultant based in Chicago.

While people drink coffee throughout the day, they mainly buy it in the morning and afternoon, Tristano said.

"When you think of a cafe in the U.S., you think breakfast. In Europe, when you think cafe, it's a place to have coffee and have a drink," he said. Offering alcohol on menus and shifting more to a wine bar at night can help generate sales revenue, he said.

Coffee and alcohol complement each other because they're consumed at different parts of the day, said Harry Balzer, who studies eating habits and is vice president of the NPD Group, a market research company.

"What the appeal here is the customer base tends to be the same—adults—and there's further utilization of the facility beyond its peak period," he said.

But he questions whether the novelty will wear off. "If it's a product that will save us time and money, it'll be a trend and not a fad. If it doesn't do one of those two things, it's probably more of fad," Balzer said.

For now, these cafes are alternatives to Starbucks or the corner bar—even though they're not quite either. Unlike a coffeehouse, there's no mad rush to the counter or pressure to leave. But the vibe isn't exactly bar-like either. Cafes that serve booze and beans are quieter than sports bars, classier than dive bars, and cozier than clubs—more like lounges. But at the end of the day, they're places to be social, hang with friends, grab a snack and still work on laptops that run on free Wi-Fi.

Aundray Akbar, 28, a restaurant server who lives in Wheeling, stopped by Scarlet in Boystown, which reopened three weeks ago after a fire forced it closed earlier this year, simply because it looked low-key. "I'm not in the mood for a bar scene, just something light and easy," he said. "I don't have to worry about loud music and a bunch of drunks."

Tony Pehar, whose parents are from Croatia, wanted to channel his European roots when he opened Pure Cafe last month. "When you go back to Croatia, you go to a cafe and start off with espresso, maybe order a beer and cevapi or flatbread and sit around with some friends," he said. Infusing that European flair into his cafe and menu, Pehar offers Nutella crepes, risotto

"If it's a product that will save us time and money, it'll be a trend and not a fad. If it doesn't do one of those two things, it's probably more of fad."

Brew x 2

5 spots to double up with coffee and beer

By Carly Fisher

During the day, our No. 1 vice is coffee. After dark, we'd rather get our buzz from something a little more potent. And sometimes we like to mix it up with a martini at noon and a mocha at midnight. We're no strangers to local cafe-bars that serve both beans and booze, but as more new spots pop up, here's where to go to get the right balance of both, sometimes even in the same glass.

Pure Cafe

6251 N. McCormick Rd. 773-463-3400

The vibe: Lined with TVs showcasing sports, this casual West Rogers Park cafe is a good bet if you're looking to catch up with friends—but not if you're cramming for a final exam.

The coffee: Illy espresso drinks, including the Pure Frenchman ($3), a vanilla-hazelnut latte topped with whipped cream and chocolate

The booze: Limited selection of beer, wine and liquor, including some cocktails such as a pomegranate martini ($11), featuring Grey Goose vodka, Pama pomegranate liqueur, sour mix and cranberry juice

Best of both worlds: Peppermint O'Patty ($5.50), a refreshingly sweet blend of espresso, mint syrup, Baileys and Ghirardelli chocolate

Scarlet

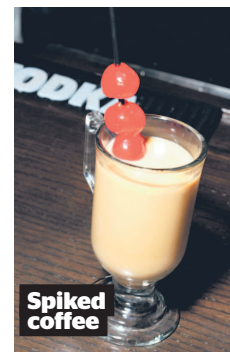

3320 N. Halsted St.
 773-348-1053

The vibe: Recently reopened after a fire in February, this revamped Boystown lounge now provides a social spot complete with free Wi-Fi during the day before becoming a party destination in the evening.

The coffee: Unlimited Metropolis drip coffee for $2 until 8 p.m.; by request only after 8 p.m. Add flavored schnapps to your brew for $1.50 Monday-Friday.

The booze: Full bar serving cocktails such as the Maroon, a.k.a. "Trail Mix" ($11), a sweet, nutty blend of Frangelico, Grand Marnier and cranberry juice.

Best of both worlds: The Au Laid ($9), made with tequila, iced coffee and butterscotch schnapps.

Cafe Wha Who?

228 W. Chicago Ave. 312-475-1820

The vibe: This boho River North cafe-bar supports the local arts scene by hosting gallery openings, live music events and poetry readings. It's also a comfy spot to catch up on a good book.

The coffee: Espresso bar (drinks run $2-$3.75) stocked with coffee from local roaster Star Lounge Coffee Company, 2521 W. Chicago Ave.

The booze: Full selection of liquor, beer and wine (drinks run $6-$8); no specialty cocktail list, but Wha Who shares ownership with Red Kiva (1108 W. Randolph St.), so we doubt they'll hold out on us for too long.

Best of both worlds: The Chiaroscuro ($9), a light-and-dark layering of Absolut Vanilia, espresso and Godiva white chocolate liqueur. You won't find it on the menu, so be sure to ask for it by name.

Three Peas Art Lounge

75 E. 16th St. 312-624-9414

The vibe: Tucked away on a quiet South Loop side street, this cozy cafe-bar-gallery feels like a home away from home, complete with plush armchairs, free Wi-Fi and a flat-screen TV.

The coffee: Metropolis coffee and loose teas.

The booze: Full bar available starting at noon. Order a beer and receive complimentary bar snacks.

Best of both worlds: The CB2 ($8), made with coffee, Bacardi and Baileys. It's not on the menu, but regulars know to ask for it.

Little Branch Cafe

1251 S. Prairie Ave. 312-360-0101

The vibe: This cafe is big with its South Loop neighbors. It got its start as a coffee shop, then branched out into a popular brunch and lunch destination. Since getting its liquor license, it's also earned a following for cocktails.

The coffee: Full-service espresso bar featuring Metropolis coffee and custom espresso drinks such as the chocolate-covered cherry mocha ($3.25).

The booze: Fully-stocked bar turning out drinks like the Rosebud ($8), citrusy blend of Absolut Citron, triple sec and fresh-squeezed grapefruit and lime juice. Look for fall drinks such as hot wine and spiked cider soon.

Best of both worlds: Little Branch hot buttered rum ($8), made with dark rum, maple syrup, steamed milk and nutmeg.

and raznjici, skewered pork with roasted veggies and onions served with pita bread.

Overall, the cafe's vibe is inviting, unpretentious. The fireplace warms the room, and high ceilings give the space a lofty look. Stipe Zadro, 35, watched Monday night football from one of the eight flat-screen TVs plastered on the wall there. His wife sipped on merlot and listened to music played loud enough to recognize the song but soft enough to hear a conversation among friends.

"There's good music on. I can watch football and have a cup of coffee, and I can still bring my wife here and she won't be bored," said Zadro, a developer who lives in Skokie. "It's got the best of both worlds."

DOUBLE TAKE

John C. Reilly says his latest film, "Cirque du Freak: The Vampire's Assistant," is a "Twilight" series for boys. Both come from teen novel series—"Twilight" by Stephenie Meyer and "Cirque" by Darren Shan—and both examine youth-specific motifs: disenchantment, first love, teen angst, parent-hating. How they get there is another story. REDEYE

STORY

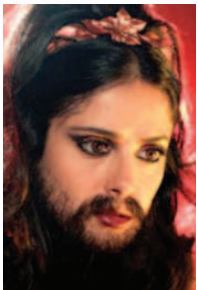

Twilight: Director Chris Weitz's "New Moon" looks as if it will spotlight the angsty adventure of young love.

Cirque: Director Paul Weitz, Chris' brother, focuses on action, gross imagery (lots of biting, ripping off of limbs, etc.) and hammy humor.

ROMANCE

Twilight: Moody teen Bella (Kristen Stewart) spots hottie vamp Edward (Robert Pattinson). He sparkles in the sun, she swoons.

Cirque: Good boy-turned-vamp Darren (Chris Massoglia) falls for monkey girl Rebecca (Jessica Carlson). No sparkles; few sparks.

FAMILY

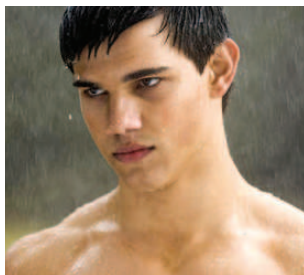

Twilight: Bella meets Edward's vampire clan—who all are as pretty, sexy and mysterious as Edward.

Cirque: After being turned by vamp Larten Crepsley (Reilly), Darren meets his freaky, frightening friends, including Salma Hayek's bearded lady (left).

WOLF-MAN

Twilight: In Bella's world, even the werewolf (Taylor Lautner, right) is hot.

Cirque: Run. Fast. He'll bite off your arm.

UNIVERSAL STUDIOS

Reilly gets his 'Freak' on

The Orlando Sentinel

After 50 films and nominations for an Oscar and a Tony, John C. Reilly should get recognized everywhere he goes.

But 20 years into his career, Reilly doesn't mind not being recognized. He loves disappearing into roles and mixing up the sorts of parts he plays, which explains roles in such diverse films as "Chicago," "The Hours," "Talladega Nights," "Boogie Nights" and "Step Brothers."

"That just means I'm doing my job," the South Side native says. "The key to being allowed to do anything is to keep changing so you don't get defined as one thing."

"After I started doing comedies, I got lots of offers to do comedies. But that's the time to go out and try to do something different."

That's why he zeroed in on "Cirque du Freak." He plays a 200-year-old vampire, part of a traveling "freak show," who takes on a teenage assistant (Chris Massoglia).

"I like thinking about and trying to play what it would do to your state of mind to have lived through everything that Crepsley has lived through—wars and technology and discovery," says Reilly, 44. "Would that make you a wise person, or would it make you a cynic?"

He thought of his best friend, a much older man.

"You get set in your ways," he says. "You know what you like to do, what you like to eat, what you're comfortable wearing. That's what Crepsley's done—found what works for him."

Reilly, who began his career at DePaul University's theater school and on the stages of the Organic and Steppenwolf theaters, says he loves "subverting expectations." But in casting him as the seen-it-all vampire, "Cirque" producers ensured this blood-sucker would have a lighter touch than other big-screen blood-suckers. Sure, Reilly's played villains and serious characters. But being a dad, he recognized the niche Darren Shan's books (the basis for the movie) were going for.

"It's not that 'Twilight' allegory for budding teen-girl sexuality and romance. This movie is the boy's version of that," he says. "It's not about romance. It's about becoming a man, puberty and adolescence changing you."

Now that he's added vampire to his resume, Reilly (who is signed to do sequels, should "The Vampire's Assistant" hit), it's on to more character roles—comic and dark, damaged and mean.

"When I was a teenager, I worried, 'What should I be? I should pick a career.' At some point, in college, I figured out that the only people who get to try their hand at everything—cops, crooks, singers, race car drivers, vampires—are actors.

"You spend six months doing the most exciting parts of whatever occupation it is you're playing. And then you move on. I turned the fun part of my life into my work."

"It's not that 'Twilight' allegory for budding teen-girl sexuality and romance. This movie is the boy's version of that."

OVER BITE?

Vampires have sunk their teeth into movies and TV shows. But has the genre been sucked dry?

Associated Press

Vampires have been an eternal force in Hollywood horror since silent-movie days, yet they have risen to new heights as the "Twilight" franchise, TV's "True Blood" and other incarnations put the bite on viewers.

In studio flicks, independent and foreign-language films and small-screen series, there are more bloodsuckers out there today than you can shake a wooden stake at.

With so many vampires afoot, will Hollywood's favorite night creatures lose their flavor with fans?

"Will there be a vampire glut? Will the vampire market crash? I don't know," said Chris Weitz, director of November's "The Twilight Saga: New Moon," Part 2 in the movie series based on Stephenie Meyer's vampire-romance novels. "It's kind of the only growth industry in America, that I can tell."

So many of Dracula's brethren are being sired nowadays that Weitz and his brother have dueling vampire films out this fall. Paul Weitz's "Cirque du Freak: The Vampire's Assistant" opens Friday, with John C. Reilly as a centuries-old bloodsucker in a traveling freak show.

While vampires have a strong pulse in Hollywood, some expect the genre could bleed out from overexposure, not unlike what happened to penguin movies a few years ago.

Penguins reached a glut after only a handful of movies, but the sheer variety of vampire stories lends them superhuman durability for exploring the issues and fears of mortals.

"I think vampires are richer veins than penguins," Reilly said. "There's only so much you can do with penguins. They're cute. They can't fly. They live in snow and ice."

Vampires have been hardy souls on screen since the 1920s and '30s. Movies and shows such as "The Lost Boys" and "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" transfused teen power to vampire tales, helping to open the current vein of hip, pretty, young dead things in the genre.

"What's particular about them now is it's coinciding with the optimum market for TV and film. It's that young market, it's kind of the 'Dawson's Creek' thing," said Michael Sheen, who co-stars as the vampire Aro in the "Twilight" sequel and played a werewolf in the "Underworld" vampire franchise. "Whereas in the past, I don't think that has been the case. The symbol of vampires has never quite hit that marketing gold."

Along with "True Blood," recent TV blood-sucker sagas include "The Vampire Diaries," "Blood Ties," "Moonlight" and Britain's "Young Dracula" and "Being Human."

Among recent and upcoming big-screen stories are "Blood: The Last Vampire," the horror comedy "Transylmania," Ethan Hawke's vampire armageddon thriller "Daybreakers" and foreign-language vamp tales such as Sweden's "Let the Right One In" and South Korea's "Thirst."

"Twilight" leads the way, its love story between an immortal vampire stud (Robert Pattinson) and a sensitive school girl (Kristen Stewart) proving irresistible to teen and older audiences alike.

So far, fans seem willing to devour as many vampire stories as Hollywood can dish out.

"The truth is, you can't have too many vampire movies, just like you can't have too many zombie movies. Each movie is capable of being allegories for different things," Reilly said. "Ours is this whole other universe for vampires that have nothing to do with Dracula or good-looking teenagers making out. It's this crazy underworld that exists, more like 'Harry Potter' than 'Twilight,' because the regular human world doesn't even know they're there."

While their popularity may ebb and flow, vampires always will have a place in the audience's heart, said Nicolas Cage, who starred in 1989's "Vampire's Kiss" and was a producer on 2000's "Shadow of the Vampire."

"The vampire is always going to be fascinating," Cage said. "It's like the vigilante cop, or it's like the cowboy or the Western. It's part of the fabric of society."

NO PASSES ACCEPTED FOR THIS ENGAGEMENT

Hilary Swank and Ewan McGregor in 'Amelia'
FOX SEARCHLIGHT

'Amelia' star McGregor doesn't mind turbulence

Los Angeles Times

Ewan McGregor's upcoming films are surrounded by controversy.

Roman Polanski's unfinished "The Ghost" is a thinly veiled indictment of Tony Blair. The satirical "The Men Who Stare at Goats" alleges that the U.S. military engaged in "psychic spying" against the Russians. And in "I Love You, Phillip Morris," out in February, McGregor plays tonsil hockey with Jim Carrey.

But in "Amelia," opening Friday, he stars as Gene Vidal, Amelia Earhart's love. McGregor chatted about his roles.

You play Earhart's lover-on-the-side, but the part itself is fairly straightforward. What was the draw?

Hilary Swank, who plays Amelia, has been a good friend of mine for years, and we've always talked about working together. I suppose we kind of kept our eyes open for something. She called me about "Amelia" just as I arrived to start shooting "I Love You, Phillip Morris," and we struggled for quite some time, but I really wanted to make it work dates-wise. So I literally made the two films at the same time, flying back and forth from Toronto.

How did it go?

Oh, my gosh, I was just happy to be working with her because I think she's such an amazing actress.

What was it like working with Polanski?

He pushes you quite hard and always demands that you look for the truth of the scene and pushes until you get there, until you stop acting it and you start feeling it. But he's also got quite a brusque manner, so you have to have a thick skin. That said, I'm very fond of him. He's one of the very few completely brilliant directors that I've worked with.

Have you been following the news coverage of what's been happening to him?

No, I try not to. I was pretty upset. I don't like to think of him sitting in a prison cell. But I wouldn't comment upon it because it's a very complicated issue, you know?

How much of what goes on in "The Men Who Stare at Goats" do you think is true? The LSD, the telekinesis, the military secrecy.

Most of it's true! In fact, the most unbelievable parts of the film are the true ones. The mundane bits are the bits we made up. The journalist in Iraq—my story, the character I play—is an invention. But there was a rumor that the Russian psychics were bombarding the U.S. president with negative energy, and there was a group within the military trying to combat it. It's crazy, but war is crazy.

Do you think America is ready for "I Love You, Phillip Morris," which is based on the true story of a man who falls in love while in prison and then stages multiple successful escapes to be with his lover?

It's a love story, an escape movie and a comedy, all about this man who goes to incredible lengths to be with the man he loves. I like it because it's a gay film, which is to say it's a film about two men in love, and I think that's an important element of it. But it's not a film about them being gay. They just happen to be gay. I also got to French kiss Jim Carrey a lot, and I quite like that too.

!!! Motherhood (PG-13)

There just aren't enough hours in the day for mother-of-two Eliza (Uma Thurman), who has to throw her daughter's birthday party and apply for a job with a parenting magazine while running errands and avoiding the film crew shooting on her street. Her husband's (Anthony Edwards) not much help and her best friend (Minnie Driver) is just another person to keep happy, so what's a busy mom to do?

The verdict: Thurman's quite good, portraying Eliza as a woman trying to find a sense of self wherever she can get it. But writer-director Katherine Dieckmann so focuses on Eliza's need to look out for No. 1 that she obscures the reasons people become parents, winding up with a movie light on love and heavy on narcissism.

'Antichrist' shocking

After their son falls to his death, a couple (Willem Dafoe, Cannes best actress winner Charlotte Gainsbourg) returns to a cabin in the woods where raw emotions (and stunning actions) spring from their complete loss of sensation. You won't believe what happens next.

The verdict: No, I can't explain the purpose of the talking fox. But controversial writer-director Lars von Trier has crafted a visceral, disturbing experience that turns loss, resentment and miscommunication into the stuff of nightmares—and recognizes destructive human behavior in its most subtle and identifiable forms. (I promise you, there's at least one shot in this movie you won't want to watch.) These are places where most won't go, but von Trier goes without fear. Does this study of gender roles spin out of control? Perhaps. The sex is angry; the violence is shocking; the performances are remarkable. You will debate this movie all night and into tomorrow. MATT PAIS IS THE METROMIX MOVIES PRODUCER.

CAPITALISM

Went and saw Capitalism: A Love Story. I'm absolutely infuriated and at the same time, excited for the people's revolution.

@iaman

Saw Capitalism on Sunday. Wish I could go to Wall Street and tape up the NYSE with crime-scene tape every day.

LAW ABIDING CITIZEN

clever, suspenseful, unpredictable and Gerard Butler is easy on the eyes. A must see!

@izzybees

Law Abiding Citizen is a whole lot of cringe-worthy violence wrapped in Gerard Butler's bad American accent.

@mental63

A Serious Man is one serious dark twist of comedy with a near perfect ending. Coen bros rock yet again.

@Rythemovieguy

A Serious Man: The Coens once again give us a unique perspective on distinctive characters, but the film misses its mark. B-

OTHER FLICKS

@sewpaflychick

Attended the premiere of Precious. Very powerful movie!! A definite must-see!

@MalybooBarbee

The Stepfather was surprisingly great, kept me on the edge of my seat the entire movie!

WHERE THE WILD THINGS ARE

@iaman

Where The Wild Things Are - Most perfect metaphor for growing up I have ever seen!

@jalant

Where the wild things are. Read the book to your 9 year old and be done with it. Pure waste.

@JaneDoeChicago

Wild Things - a love letter to childhood in all its messy chaotic glory. Let the wild rumpus start indeed!

@CrushGear

Wild Things: great. Captured essence of childhood. But, coulda been shorter, and shoulda mixed real life and fantasy better

@philwighthouse

Where the Wild Things Are: The best movie that only five people in the theater actually understood.

@chels4590

wild things was amusing and mildly depressing but most of all it reminded me of being eight years old again

@angelthetwin

"Where the Wild Things Are" blew my mind. Amazing graphics. Touching story. Definitely does the book justice. A+++

@mrbrianmorgan

where the wild things are exceeded my expectations!

Bomer
USA NETWORK

'Collar' a killer

Matthew Bomer is one of those actors who seems to have everything—but a hit.

"White Collar" likely will remedy that problem for the good-looking and skilled

White
Collar
9 p.m. Friday, USA

actor who, as slick spy Bryce Larkin, charmed fans of "Chuck." In the dryly humorous new USA series, Bomer plays genius criminal Neal Caffrey, who breaks out of prison just three months shy of his release when his girlfriend dumps him. He's quickly caught by Peter Stokes (Tim DeKay), the same FBI agent who put him in jail, and they become unlikely partners in the pursuit of an elusive art forger known as the Dutchman.

Yes, you've seen this kind of bickering buddy story a hundred times before—on other USA shows for instance—but that doesn't make "White Collar" any less enjoyable. DeKay and Bomer have great chemistry as they tease and taunt each other. The story moves quickly and keeps the chuckles flowing.

And Bomer, well, he's just a charismatic as ever.

Sweet 16
9 p.m. Friday, MTV

!!! The not-music network turns its reality series about spoiled teens into a slasher flick that delivers pools of blood, tons of screams and a lot of unintended laughter. The flick starts with the bloody murders of roller-skating teens at the Roller Dome. Flash-forward several years to the Sweet 16 party of bitchy queen bee Madison Penrose (Juliana Guill), who gets a surprise present from the Lord of Rink. Yeah, you know where this is going.

Monk
8 p.m. Friday, USA

!!! Monk's nurse and original assistant, Sharona Fleming (Bitty Schram), returns for a big reunion—until his current helper, Natalie Teeger (Traylor Howard), shows up. The two size each other up until the case of the week breaks the deadlock. Sharona's uncle died in an accident—or was it?

CoverGirl LashBlast Length Mascara

$7.49 at drug stores

When I applied the black-brown mascara to my lashes, they looked longer and fuller. The mascara didn't flake or smudge, and best of all, it didn't make my lashes clumpy. LashBlast boasts CoverGirl's longest brush, with more than 450 fine bristles, and an Elasta-Nylon formula to give you ultra-long lashes. I don't know how they did it, but I do know that I felt like a CoverGirl. LEONOR VIVANCO, REDEYE

GAMES

'Ninja Gaiden Sigma 2'

For Sony PS 3; $59.99

Even for gamers who've played Ninja Gaiden II, this update has surprises in store. Essentially unchanged is the action itself: Acrobatic master ninja Ryu Hayabusa is still deadly with a sword, a staff, claws or whatever other weapons he gets his hands on, and his ninja magic is powerful. Although the violence has been toned down, the levels have been redesigned and encounters remixed to make better battles. JUSTIN HOEGER, MCT

ALBUM

'Cosmic Egg' Wolfmother

When audiences first heard Wolfmother, the smiles were many. The young Aussie outfit, led by singer/guitarist Andrew Stockdale, winnowed down blurry stoner rock and vintage metal into its essentials: high, throaty yelps with repetitious, fantastical lyrics; contagious melodies; wifty bridges. On the new disc, the propulsion and towering sludge of the past still infuse the band's sound, from the spaced-out "Fields" to the dirt-ball drama of "10,000 Feet." But there's more weight to Stockdale's warble. It's a good Egg. A.D. AMOROSI, THE PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER

SEXY TALK WITH STEPHEN
MARKLEY,
JASON STEELE
& JENNI
SPINNER

ritaredeye
@tribune.com

The setup: Living with your significant other can increase your chances of gaining weight, which in turn can do a number on your sex life, RedEye reported this week.

Do you tell your partner he or she is too fat for sex?

Just let yourself go too

Don't look at this as a bad thing. View it as an opportunity. What do you spend most of your dating life doing? You try to look good so you'll attract a partner, right? But once you have that partner and that partner starts to balloon, what the hell recourse do you have except to—finally!—start eating at Panda Express every day for lunch? Just let yourself go, I say. Enjoy life. Stop wasting time working out, eating vegetables or breathing not laboriously. Eventually, you'll outpace your significant other in weight gain, and that'll show 'em just what they're dealing with. It can be a race to find out who will blink first in the face of cardiovascular health issues.

OFF THE MARKLEY COLUMNIST STEPHEN MARKLEY IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Why not get healthy together?

Luckily, my partner and I are both relatively in shape. I can't imagine what "too fat for sex" would be. Is it that you can't make the relevant parts connect or that one person is smothering the other during the act? If that is the case, I would hope the larger person would notice this on his own. If not, then you have to make a decision: Do you love your partner unconditionally, even if he looks like a "Biggest Loser" contestant? Or do you give him an ultimatum: Shape up or ship out? If it does reach that point, both of you should get healthy together. Exercising is known to increase your libido anyway, so it's a win-win. Otherwise you both are going to go without sex, and then you'll both be big losers.

BOY ON BOYSTOWN COLUMNIST JASON STEEL IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Be tactful with your partner

In the gay-gal community, this phenomenon is known as the lesbian spread. Two women partner up, then stop going out and stay in their "nest" watching "CSI:NY" reruns, hence their butts simultaneous expand. While there's no such thing as too doughy for doin' it, if you notice your partner's getting heavy, gentle nudges are the way to go. Proclaim that you'd like the both of youse to eat better, join a flag-football team or pick up Wii Fit and make exercise a daily, fun joint activity. Don't go for the jugular and declare her too svelte to schtupp ... or you might never have sex again.

UPTOWN GRRL JENNI SPINNER IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

TURTLE POWER!

By Ariel Alexovich | FOR REDEYE

Dora, Spongebob, meet Michaelangelo. And Leonardo, Donatello and Raphael, your new neighbors at Nickelodeon.

Yep, the big orange kids' network has acquired the global rights to the 25-year-old Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle franchise for a cool $60 million, according to The Hollywood Reporter. Nickelodeon plans on creating a new, CG-animated Turtles TV show, plus a new movie to be made with its Viacom cousin, Paramount Pictures. Both projects are scheduled to come out in 2012 (precluding any Mayan-prophe-sized global implosion, that is).

At Comic-Con in July, two producers developing the new Turtles film said the live-action/CG movie "would return to the franchise's roots and that in addition to action and humor of the first film in 1990, it would have the darker tone of the original comics," according to THR.

We're all for the movie and new TV show—so long as they don't change the classic '80s theme song, that is. "Heroes in a half-shell: Turtle Power!"

TMNT TIMELINE

1984

The Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles first come out of the sewer in a comic book. More than 1 million copies were sold, making it the most successful independently published comic at the time.

1987

The Renaissance-artist-inspired reptiles hit the TV screen in animated form. "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" first airs as a holiday special, and quickly becomes a Saturday-morning staple.

1990

The live-action "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles: The Movie" premieres, featuring the back stories of the Turtles, their sensei Splinter, plucky journalist April O'Neil and vigilante Casey Jones.

1991

Clearly the best year in Turtle history. A movie sequel comes out—known mainly by its subtitle, "The Secret of the Ooze," and known mainly for Vanilla Ice's "Go, Ninja, Go!" mad rap. To top it off, Barbara Walters interviews the Turtles in her annual pre-Oscars celeb interview show. (They act cool, but rude.)

1993

A third Turtles movie released. Widely panned, it doesn't even get a subtitle, and Shredder isn't even the villain. No cowabunga here.

2003

The beginning of a new Turtle resurgence. A revamped Turtles animated series debuts on Fox. This kicks some shell!

2007

The slickly titled "TMNT" CG movie wins its opening box office weekend, pulling in $25 million. That'd buy a lot of pizza.

2009

Nickelodeon buys the franchise and announces plans to create a new CG series for TV. Will the network show favoritism for the orange Turtle, Michaelangelo?

creepy Cruise

If Tom Cruise's bizarre antics ever made you think he's a psycho, well, you're not alone. In an interview with blackbookmag.com, "American Psycho" director Mary Harron said Christian Bale studied the A-list star's mannerisms to create his murderous role. "One day he called me and he had been watching Tom Cruise on David Letterman, and he just had this very intense friendliness with nothing behind the eyes, and he was really taken with this energy." Creepy.

Bunny business

Playboy is getting into the music—sort of. The mag tapped seven musical acts, including Motely Crue, Q-Tip and Pharrell, to each design a T-shirt using the iconic bunny image. While most of the shirts prominently feature the logo, Q-Tip's design is dominated by a crude scrawl that reads, "Vive la Bunny." The custom tees are available at most Bloomingdale's stores and on the chain's Web site for $32.

Gaffigan back!

Jim Gaffigan is getting the perfect homecoming. His Jan. 30 Chicago Theatre show sold out Thursday, causing producers to add another show Jan. 29. He'll get to see his family in the Windy City and Indiana. Finally, the comic who has famously riffed on Hot Pockets, bacon and cake will get to chow down on another favorite—deep-dish pizza. "Where my hotel is ... kind of determines what deep-dish I'll get," he told RedEye on Thursday. "Because I not only love pizza, but I'm lazy."

Gaffigan

Going commando

Who needs underwear? Apparently not "The Bachelorette's" Ed Swiderski and Jillian Harris. The two nevertheless were at Victoria Secret store opening on Michigan Avenue on Wednesday. Asked what he thinks is the sexiest thing a woman could wear, Swiderski said: "No panties," people.com reports. Harris told the mag "no bra" was sexiest.

Swiderski

Master plan

Good news for foodies: "Top Chef Masters" officially will be back for a second season, Bravo announced Thursday. The show, won by Chicago chef Rick Bayless in its first season, will look virtually the same, with Kelly Choi back as host. The biggest change will be at the judges' table, which will make room for the addition of "Top Chef" series judge Gail Simmons.
